

25th July 1951.

Dear Prof. Calamandrei:

I.3.7/29

I telephoned your Rome office today in the hope that you could have dinner with us. The young lady who answered the telephone tried to give me some information, but what it was I have not the least idea. My defeat was a complete rout!

If you find it convenient, please telephone me at Albergo Inghilterra.

Then possibly we can arrange to meet. We hope so.

At any rate, Mrs. Cahn

✓ And I am deeply grateful
for the books you sent me.
You will have our further
and more detailed thanks
as soon as we have read the books, for
the reading is more meaningful than the receipt, pleasant as this is.

Rome is wonderful,
but our hearts remain
with Tuscany.

Yours cordially,
Edward N. Cahn.
